The AM10(Natural Ventilation in Non-Domestic Buildings) is a key source of guidance on avoiding excessive solar gains. The guidance contained in this new edition also enables practitioners to apply the basic principles of natural ventilation based on a sound understanding.

As well as updating the first edition of AM10, it is also intended to compliment the revised Guide B2 by providing more detailed information on how to implement a decision to adopt natural ventilation, whether as the sole servicing strategy for a building, or as an element in a mixed mode design. Contents of AM10 include: Developing the design strategy, ventilation components and system integration and has detailed information on design calculations.

Topics include Dongtan – Carbon Neutral City, Managing Engineering Services – Existing Buildings, Managing Engineering Services – Existing Buildings, Old Buildings – New Solutions, Energy Targeting - What do our Buildings Consume, Whole Life Costing –Design & Operation Implications and Natural Ventilation & Mixed Mode Design will be presented and discussed.
